SPORTING NEWS.

By LEON.
THE FINAL.

My favorite sport, I have no song for thee;
No condor could kiss the clouds so gray,
Yet, since we must part, I say good day.
Be good and better, and yet be clever;
Do great things and do not dream the winter long;
And so make thy aim, in the great forever,
One noble, sweet song.

The time has come when the ball and bat must be laid aside, for the ball a few times larger, but before this large ball is introduced, the Standard Giants, champions of the South, and the National Baptists, champions of the state, meet for the finish at Athletic Park Monday, September 16.

In the Ropes.

The Gans-Britt fight, from a general standpoint, was very disappointing, for it was hoped that Britt would stay long enough to be knocked down and out, but the wily Westerner was too smart; peeping into the future, he saw his finish and tossed up his sponge in the fifth round. Following is the fight by rounds.

A left swing to the body cleverly blocked by Joe Gans cost Jimmy Britt any chance he might have had to win the lightweight championship of the world Monday and brought to a close five rounds of fast fighting, witnessed by a crowd of about 14,000 people at Recreation Park. The blow caught by Gans on his elbow was struck in the middle of the fourth round. It broke Britt's wrist, and though he went on again in the fifth round, he was helpless in both offense and defense. It was not until this round that he informed his seconds of the mishap.

"What's the use of my going on? I can't fight. I am helpless," he said to Tiv Krelling. Captain of Police Gleason was notified at the ring side and stopped the fight. Referee Welch gave the decision to Gans. Three doctors after an examination stated that the injury was a fracture and dislocation of the lower end of the ulna, the innermost bone of the wrist. Whether it is a genuine fracture or not, Britt showed such intense suffering while the doctors were manipulating his wrist that the tears rolled unchecked down his cheeks.

"I was utterly helpless," he said. I could not even hold up my left hand after I broke it. I had to guard for Gans' left, and had no punches except with my right."

The fight, while it lasted, was a slugging match, but it was perfectly evident to every trained observer that Britt had no chance to win from Gans. For the first time in his life he was outmatched. Britt's lack of coolness was partly responsible for the miserable end of the fight.

From the first tap of the gong he appeared over eager. He was not content to take the advice given him by his seconds to make Gans do the leading, but he rushed headlong into quarters that developed an inequitable slugging match in which the champion had by far the advantage.

In the first round Britt staggered Gans to the ropes with a left swing on the neck that had lots of force in it. In the same round he also used left and right successfully to the body and face, but took in punishment a straight left on the nose that slowed him down.

The second round developed a mix-up at the ropes in which both men exchanged vicious rights and lefts, Gans taking the advantage.

In the third Gans followed his tactics of crowding Britt into a corner, and the Californian had his hands and feet busy working his way out. The round was even.

Gans drew first blood in the fourth with a lightning-like straight left that brought a scarlet stream trickling from the corner of Britt's mouth. It was right after this that Britt threw all of his strength into a left swing that proved his merciful undoing.

The public has from time to time had its attention called to the great fall entertainment which is to be the first half of October. Since nothing of its kind has ever been pulled off in the South, a grand time is looked for. It is the aim of the young men behind the scheme to give the people something new, hence they decided to have a Horse Show. All owners of horses and buggies have an opportunity to show the public how soft it is to be easy. The exact date and place will be announced next week. Those wishing to enter may 'phone 4496—Y, Boyd and Battle, Tenth avenue and Cedar street.
